"Profession and Practice"—By Nell Brinkley

When she was "out" of society she told how she would let friends "in"—

You've read tales about a fairy who dropped into a poor man's cottage in the howling of a dark, windy night and begged, pretending to be a human, for a bit of bread and a cup of ale to wash it down. And how the poor man would throw up his hands, and show his patches, and open his cupboard to show its bare shelves, and would say, sorrowfully:

"Not a crumb have I, wayfarer. An' you journey by again some time, and I have a brew in the pot, I'll fill thee!" And then the fairy would laugh in his long whiskers and put a scarlet purse into the poor man's hands, saying:

"Here be, friend, two gold coins in this purse, and as fast as thou take them out and spend them, two shall grow in their place. It shall have always in it the good sound of jingling money!"

And then he would take himself off in the wind of the night.

And then one day back would journey the fairy, passing again that way. And you know how it was!

The fairy begged a bit of bread and a draught of ale to wash it down. And the poor man, grown rich and fat and proud, with a big round tummy and pig's eyes and gold thread on his jerkin and a ring on his thumb, would throw up his hands at the very idea and herd the little whiskered man to the door and out into the wind again.

"No ale and white bread for beggars!" quoth he, and returned pliously to his fire.

He didn't practice what he professed. Have you, maybe, ever happened to know a lady like that?

The prize was won by Miss Lou Redd.

A Halloween house picnic was given at "The Luray" by the Misses Alley to their house guests and a few friends Monday evening, November 1.

The parlors and dining-room were beautifully decorated with forest branches, corn, pumpkins and other products of the fields.

In the rear parlor a tent was pitched, where the mysteries of the future were unfolded by Madame La Romancau. The scene was made weird by shaded lamps, Halloween lanterns, candles and the costumes of the guests, who were admitted by Mr. Wilkerson, in ghostly garb.

Many of the character representations were fine. Mrs. A. H. Wilkerson appeared as a (lambourine girl); Miss Essie Shepperson as the cobbler; Miss Wilkerson as the fortune-teller; and Madame La Romancau as Miss Elizabeth Alley came as Indian Summer.

Mr. Hunkinut was perfect as an Indian squaw, Vernon Wells, the Merry Widow, and Master Ray Wilkerson, the Little Red Devil. Others of the company represented witches and ghouls.

The company was entertained with music, remarks from C. W. White on Halloween's origin and customs, past and present—and a ghost story was told by Vernon Wells.

At 10 o'clock the guests unmasked, after which they proceeded to the dining-room, where refreshments were served, the Halloween cake cut, and various games enjoyed until a late hour.

Miss Werner's Entertainment.
A very enjoyable evening was spent last Monday at the residence of Miss Ruth Werner, where a masked Halloween party was given by the West End Club. The house was very artistically decorated with autumn leaves and Jack-o'-lanterns. After unmasking, which was called for by Clotter Werner, games were indulged in. During the evening, Charles Pearson and Robert E. Lee Price amused the crowd by singing several of the latest songs, accompanied by Professor H. L. Gregory, of Manchester.

Refreshments were served at a very late hour, and at the conclusion of the same Miss Susie Miller Dundon sang a beautiful solo, "Silver Threads Among the Gold."

Those present were Misses Susie M. Dundon, Hilda Will, Ethelyn Tiller, Ruth Warner, Marna Booker, Freda Dietz, Della Phillips, Lottie Cross, Norma Lothe, Doris Werner, Mrs. Will, Mrs. Dundon, Mrs. Werner, Messrs. Clotter Werner, Charles Pearson, Ben Golden, Lee Whitfield, Robert Hirsch, Harold Mowry, Louis Arnall, Fritz Will, Carol Parsons, Robert E. Lee Price.

King's Daughters to Meet.
The Williams Memorial Circle of King's Daughters will meet with Mrs. Charles Boshier, 103 North Sixth Street, on Tuesday afternoon, November 9, at half-past 4 o'clock.

Organ Recital.
An entertainment of special interest to musical people of Richmond will be an organ recital, by Ben Potter, organist at the Monumental Church, on Monday evening, November 15, in St. Paul's Church, under the auspices of the Flue-guinet Society.

Mr. Potter is a musician of some note, and is a fellow of the Royal Organists' Society, London, England. The program will include a selected one, and music-lovers anticipate a rare entertainment.

Meeting To-Day.
The general board of the Sheltering Arms Free Hospital will meet to-day at 12 o'clock in the hospital. Members are asked to be present.

To Attend Wedding.
